Notable speakers included former chairman of the National Human Rights Commission Mizanur Rahman, and Dhaka University law department Professor Shahnaz Huda. They emphasised the importance of legal research and its role in shaping the future of legal practice in Bangladesh.

During the two-day event, participants presented research papers on diverse topics including pollution and mental health. This wide range of subjects showcased the students' commitment to addressing contemporary legal challenges through rigorous research.

Six of the participants were recognised as the best presenters and were awarded certificates of recognition and monetary prizes.

Vice-chancellor Tanweer Hasan highlighted the significance of such conferences in facilitating a research-oriented mindset among law students.

He announced plans to elevate IUB's law department to a full-fledged School of Law starting from the autumn 2024 semester.

Mizanur Rahman underscored the role of legal research in promoting human rights and justice.

Professor Shahnaz Huda praised IUB for organising the conference and providing a platform to students to showcase their research, stressing the need for law students to stay updated with global legal developments.
